POETRY.

OVER THE RIVER.

Over the river they beckon to me,
Loved ones who've crossed to the other side,
The gleam of their snowy robes I see,
But their voices are lost in the dashing tide.
There's one with ringlets of sunny gold,
And eyes the reflection of heaven's own blue,
He crossed in the twilight gray and cold,
And the pale mist hid him from mortal view.
We saw not the angels who met him there,
The gates of the city we could not see,
Over the river, over the river,
My brother stands waiting to welcome me.

Over the river the boatman pale
Carrying another, the household pet;
Her brown curls waving in the gentle gale,
Darling Minnie! I see her yet,
She crossed on her bosom her dimpled hands,
And fearlessly entered the phantom bark,
We felt it glide from its silver sands,
And all our sunshine grew strangely dark;
We know she is safe on the further side,
Where all the ransomed and angels be;
Over the river, the mystic river,
My childhood's idol is waiting me.

For none return from those quiet shores,
Who cross with the boatman cold and pale;
We hear the dip of the golden oars,
And catch a gleam of the snowy sail;
And lo! they have passed from our yearning hearts,
They cross the stream and are gone for aye.
We may not sunder the veil apart
That hides from our vision the gates of day,
We only known that their barks no more
May sail with us o'er life's stormy sea;
Yet somewhere I know on the unseen shore,
They watch, and beckon, and wait for me.

And I sit and think when the sunset's gold
Is flushing river and hill and shore,
I shall one day stand by the water cold,
And list for the sound of the boatman's oar;
I shall watch for a gleam of the flapping sail;
I shall hear the boat as it gains the strand,
I shall pass from sight with the boatman pale,
To the better shore of the spirit land.
I shall know the loved who have gone before,
And joyfully sweet the meeting will be,
When over the river, the peaceful river,
The Angel of death shall carry me.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE FATE OF A QUEEN; OR THE BEAUTIFUL LOUISA D'ORLEANS.

It was an apartment in the place of Charles II., King of Spain. The magnificence of the seventeenth century was visible throughout all its arrangements, and the gorgeous taste distinguishing the Spanish ladies of that period, was conspicuous in almost a ludicrous degree, in the person occupying the apartment. Arrayed in costly robes, such as a Queen might wear on presentation of days, sat a woman, old, wrinkled, and savage-looking, her lips contracted into a pinched, malicious expression, her little black eyes sparkling with hate, and her long, thin, bony fingers eagerly held out to receive something from the hands of one of the royal household.

'Indeed, indeed, my lady duchess,' pleaded the man, who stood at the door of the room, as if loth to come further, 'I cannot leave them here without orders from the queen. You know what a special charge she gave me on the very morning she left the palace, and it is as much as my place is worth to have them out of my sight at all.'

'Bring them here, fellow,' said the lady, enraged to find her authority questioned. 'Bring them here, and I will let you know that I have something to order. Nay,' she continued, springing across the room as nimbly as her age permitted, closing the door and locking it, 'you shall obey me.—Take the creatures out of the basket instantly!'

The man reluctantly opened the basket, carefully releasing from it two beautiful parrots of a very rare plumage. They perched on his hand and shoulder, apparently delighted at their escape from the basket, and began chattering in French. Reaching out her hands, the old woman caught them, and in a moment she had wrung the necks of both with her lank, skinny fingers, and thrust them hastily back. A spot of blood fell to the floor; for so violently had she twisted the delicate throat of the smallest, that the skin was wholly ruptured.

She started, and grew pale for an instant, as she saw it staining the pure white of the finely plastered floor, pure and smooth as marble; but recovering herself, she turned to the man, and told him to take them away. He stood clapping his hands together, and exclaiming, in a confused jumble of French and Spanish, over the poor dead birds.

Unlocking the door, she applied her satin slipper to the basket, and would probably have done the same to the man had he not hastened out of the room to remove the birds to a place where they could be immediately stuffed and mounted, so as to resemble life as much as possible before the queen should return.

This idea getting possession of his head, he went away, forbearing to give utterance to the bitter oaths which had nearly escaped his lips. Closing the door, the panting old woman threw herself down on a pile of cushions, covered with gold brocade, sprinkling her hands as she lay with some odorous perfume from a richly cut bottle.

'No more French chattering from them. I would I could rid the palace of her so easily. I would like to do it myself, if it were only that I should hear no more of the queen's sweet temper and amiability Faugh, I hate her.'

It did not keep her awake, however, for in a short time she slept as soundly as if she had taken a draught from the Lethe, instead of the richly spiced cordial which accompanied her noon meal, and of which no head but one as strong as that of the Duchess of Terranueva could have withstood the effects. For the lady who had just executed this piece of spiteful malice was none other than the first lady of honor (Camarrera Mayor) to Louisa d'Orleans, the Queen of Spain and Consort of Charles II. Descended by her father from the royal house of Aragon, and by her mother from Fernando Cortez, who left her mines of gold and a principality, the Duchess was haughty, proud, and arrogant, even more than her Spanish blood entitled her to be. Unscrupulous she certainly was in regard to the means of destroying anything that offended her, as in the case of her cousin, Don Corlas of Arragon, whom she actually hired bravos to dispatch, because he aspired to Terranueva, which she inherited in her own right. From her husband she held the title also of Duchess of Mondeloome.

Previous to her being called to the queen's household, she had resided in magnificence with her daughter-in-law, the second Duchess of Mantleamose; but wherever she was she claimed rule as a right which her rank and talents gave her.

When Charles—himself a mere boy, bashful, inexperienced and ignorant—brought to his throne the young and lovely Louisa d'Orleans, and summoned the Duchess to his household as lady of honor to the Queen, a fierce hatred seemed to possess the soul of one who could not bear to witness youth and beauty in another, now that her own was gone for ever. Confident of her superiority to the 'married babies,' as she contemptuously termed them, she claimed and exerted a sway, which, at any other court, would have utterly ruined her. But Charles was careless and inconsiderate, and the Queen was all sweetness; and so tacitly acknowledgek her influence.

* * * * * * *

Louisa d'Orleans, daughter of the Duke of Orleans, brother to the French King by Henrietta of England, was about eighteen years of age when proposals was made to her from the youthful King of Spain. She shrank with horror from the formality and gloom of the Spanish Court, so different as she apprehended from the light and joyous character of that of her uncle, the French King.

And, indeed, had Charles welcomed her to a fairy bower, with sunshine smiling down upon it all the year through, it would not have tempted her; for, alas, the noble maiden's heart was no longer hers to bestow. Long since, even from her childhood, it had clung tenderly to that of her cousin, the Dauphin of France.

When, therefore, her kingly uncle accepted the offer of Charles for Louisa, and she remonstrated against it, Louisa told her that he could have asked no better for his own daughter. 'Ah, sire,' she replied, 'but you could, if you pleased, have done so much better for your niece!'

But the laws of courts over hearts are despotic, and the fair and noble Louisa, stifling the emotions she dared not betray, hid her bleeding heart under the bridal flowers, and became the Queen of Spain.

From the moment of the bridal she had hidden from every eye the sight of her sufferings; and so sweetly and amiably had she performed every duty of her blameless and innocent life, in a court where pride, craftiness and intrigue abounded, that Charles, ignorant, bashful and a woman hater generally, gave her the admiration and consideration which she truly deserved.

To the last of her brief existence, he greeted her as when he met her on the bridge leading to the Isle of Pheasants, and received her from the hand of the Marquis of Astorga, exclaiming 'My queen! my queen!' Not all the dreary discomforts of that tedious and stormy travel by which she arrived at Madrid, could disturb the sweetness and equanimity of that temper which won every heart, save that of the vindictive duchess of Terranueva; nor although mortified by the ignorance of the King, who did not even know the names of several important towns in his own dominions, did she ever show, by a single look or expression, that she was not perfectly satisfied with his wisdom and attainments. Still had she truly loved him, his indifferent manner at times would have caused her the most excruciating grief; as, for instance, when she wished to repeat a summer excursion which had once given her great pleasure, she was coolly refused on the plea of expense; yet, almost immediately afterwards, he set off for the Escurial, attended by two or three of his courtiers.

Still amiable, Louisa sent thither an affectionate letter, accompanied by the gift of a splendid diamond ring. In return, the King sent her a casket of gold filigree, containing some beads of precious wood, set with diamonds. A little note was therein, which she eagerly opened. It contained these words:—

'Madame, there is a great storm of wind here and have killed six wolves.'

Probably this was the only letter which he ever wrote her.

Whatever was developed in Charles of a high or manly nature, was indisputably, owing to Louisa. For his sake, she learned, privately, the Spanish dances; and received for this accomplishment, his delighted exclamation of 'My rena!'

The sway of the Duchess of Terranueva now became insupportable. Not a day passed, that did not witness some demonstration of her intolerable pride and haughtiness of demeanor, not only to the whole court, which she kept in incessant broils, but towards the king and queen.

These repeated instances called forth the fiery temper of the king, whose wide mouth, and thick Austrian lips, sometimes gave the lie to his fair hair, delicate complexion, and the remarkable sweetness of his eyes—showing that he could, on provocation, become terrible. He swore big oaths that she should be displaced, and was already on the watch for a suitable person to fill her situation. The Duchess of Albuquerque, the Duchess d'Infantado, and the Marchioness de Los Velez were the principal aspirants. Don Pedro of Arragon asked an audience of her one morning, and gave her the unexpected advice to remove herself from court, as quietly as possible, lest a public dismissal might ensue.

Stung with rage, she refused to believe that he had any authority for thus advising her. Rushing unannounced into the king's presence, she related the insult, and asked his majesty's permission to leave a situation in which she was allowed to meet with such affronts.

'Certainly,' answered Charles, 'you are at perfect liberty to leave the place when ever you choose!'

She was petrified with rage and amazement. Not even royalty had ever dared to speak thus to the duchess. She sprang from his presence, and as the queen was not yet risen, she entered her chamber without her usual ceremonies.

With her habitual sweetness, Louisa said, 'I regret, madame, that anything so unpleasant should have occurred ——.'

Before she could speak further, the duchess struck her hand violently upon a small table, and caught up a splendid Chinese fan, much valued by her majisty, breaking it in pieces, and throwing the glittering fragments around the chamber.

'It is quite beneath the dignity of a consort of Spain to lament the dismission of her Camarrera Mayor,' she said haughtily.

Her departure occasioned the most lively satisfaction, and her situation was soon filled more acceptably by the Duchess Albuquerque, who adopted an entirely different policy, being as good, gentle and obliging, as her predecessor had been the reverse.

* * * * * * *

As if the fate of Henrietta of England had been entailed on her fair and beautiful daughter, consigning her, after a few brief years of life, to an early grave, Louisa began to exhibit the same symptoms as her mother had done. Returning from riding on horse-back, an exercise which was admirably adapted to her figure, and in which she excelled, she complained of violent and distressing pain. More than at any other time, the king had been struck with the wondrous beauty of 'My rena' on this occasion. She rode a spirited jennet of his own choosing, and was attired magnificently in a riding dress of black cloth, with much gold buttons fastening the habit and sleeves. A Spanish hat and feathers adorned her head, and her little fairy-like gloves were closed with diamond buttons. As she took these buttons from the splendid casket, which no hands save her own ever opened, the superb peral called Peregrina, as large as a small pear, hanging to a diamond clasp, which formed her present from Charles, when they first met, caught her eye. She held it up carefully, as to remind him of that meeting, and caught his admiring gaze. It brought fourth her blushes like a girl's. Perhaps there was another remembrance mingled with his, that she blushed to recall. That, too, was the hour in which she felt imperatively called upon to shut out from her loving heart the image of her cousin.

A momentary faintness, in which the blush was supplanted by deathly paleness alarmed the king. He sprang towards her, but already, she had recovered, and almost shrunk from his clasping arms. She attributed it to the close perfume of the orange and jasmine trees which were standing in silver cases about the room; and with this prevarication on her lips (a rare instance in a Frenchwoman!) she buttoned on the diminutive gloves, and went slowly down the grand staircase, to the courtyard of the palace, where grooms were walking the superb animals up and down, while awaiting the royal pair. As the groom held out his hand for the little foot which the queen was about to place in it, Charles, impelled by a sudden gallantry, which it must be confessed, did often possess him, sprang forward, and received it in his own.

'Quite, recovered, my rena!' he asked tenderly.

'Quite!' she answered, but even as she spoke a sudden pang shot through her frame. She pressed her hand upon her heart, as if absolutely to crush out the pain and the paleness returned to her cheek; but this time Charles was mounting his horse and did not perceive it.

She rode superbly that day—her gay jennet distancing the other animals—and then, when carried almost out of sight, she would return with a bright smile on her cheek, and an apparent elasticity of spirits that seemed unconquerable by sickness or sorrow.

It was after this ride that she began gradually to droop; and in February 1689, the flower of Spanish queens closed the beautiful eyes that never beamed but in sweetness upon all. Whether the fatal poison, of which she was supposed to be the victim, was introduced into her food, or into the flowers she so loved to inhale, is one of the mysteries that cannot be divulged until the earth gives up its dead. The dull, heavy formalities of the Spanish court, which the light and airy graces of Louisa d'Orleans had softened into something more elastic, resumed their sway after her death, never perhaps to be again touched into beauty by so sweet a spirit as hers. All tender and delicate memories cluster around her name; and even the proud and haughty Spaniards cherish the records of her gentle and unstained life with tenderness and respect, as the best and most beloved by her subjects of all the queens of Spain.

FIENDISH ATTEMPT ON THE NORFOLK RAILROAD.—We learn that on Saturday night last, some wretches in human form, for whom hanging is far too light a punishment, deliberately set themselves to work to render the tressels and rails of at least two miles of the Norfolk Railroad, in the county of Isle of Wight, impassable to trains, and a trap for the lives of those in them. Longitudinal wooden ties of the rails were split up, the tressels at some points cut, and left standing as though they had not been touched, and large trees in addition felled at different points, so as to drop upon the track. After completing their work, the telegraph poles were also cut down. Fortunately the energetic road-master discovered the damage in time to repair it before the trains of yesterday went over the road. But for this, we might have to record a terrible catastrophe, with serious destruction of human life.

Petersburg Press.

A loquacious lady once offered to bet her husband fifty dollars that she would not speak a word for a week. 'Done!' said the delighted husband, staking the money, which the lady immediately put in her pocket, observing very gravely that she would secure it until the wager was decided. 'Why, madam,' said the husband, 'I have won it already.' 'You are mistaken in the time,' said the lady; 'I mean the week after I am buried!' The lady went a 'shopping' that very afternoon.

ELIZABETH CITY:

TUESDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1859.

DEMOCRATIC DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The Democratic Convention to nominate a candidate to represent the first Congressional District of North Carolina in the thirty-sixth Congress of the U. States, will be held in EDENTON, Chowan County, on THURSDAY, the 26th day of May.

A full attendance of delegates is very desirable.

BY ORDER OF THE COMMITTEE.

A POLITICAL CREVASSE!

The 'Opposition' (for some time devoid of principles, and now without even a name) held a grand pow-wow at Camden Court House on Tuesday last. It was a fair occasion for the leaders to let off their surplus gas, and for the 'faithful' to be instructed in the devious ways of 'opposition' politics.

Mr. James W. Hinton led off; and, from the high political elevation he occupied, looked pityingly down upon prostrate Democracy, which he described as having the death-rattles, and which he declared himself too humane to assail with violence—he had too much charity for that. Nevertheless, before he got through, he so far forgot his previous remarks and his humanity as to berate the poor Democracy in as round set phrases as any body else.—The Democracy were down, and life ought to be crushed out of them; and, presto change! he pitched into them for the grossest corruption and extravagance in the management of the Government! It rather staggered the understanding of our friends to appreciate the justice of characterizing a poor, weak, creature, flat on his back, and with the death-rattle in his throat, as a mighty engineer, mounted on the car of Government and madly driving us to destruction! But it pleased the 'faithful,' and it was no business of the Democrats, as the speech was'nt made to please them.

Next followed Mr. Smith, with a smoother, keener, and more skilfully managed blade. He thought he saw day-break in the distance, and followed it with a winking eye, without stopping to say the Democrats were both impotent and powerful. It was enough to contend that they were the one or the other. His impression seemed to be that the Democracy were in a decaying condition, and that a few vigorous and well directed blows would do the business for them affectually. He thought he saw a streak of light in the horizon, which betokened an up-rising of the people and a down-falling of the Democracy.—And so forth, et cetera.

Then came Mr. Pool. He sung his old song—denounced the corruption and extravagances of the Democracy, and, as a matter of course, foretold their certain downfall and their inevitable destruction. He drew a marine picture (perhaps he thought he was talking to the marines) of a ship at sea, needing help; and then painted a landscape, in the foreground of which was a ricketty railroad car (Democracy) from the bottom, ends, sides, and top of which the Democracy were falling promiscuously.—He, too, saw Mr. Smith's streak of light—day was breaking—the Democracy were almost used up and done for—and much more to the same effect.

So far, all was fair sailing with the 'opposition,' who seemed to be gliding smoothly down upon the bosom of some mighty stream, whose resistless volume brooked no impediment, when all at once, the banks gave way, and we were presented with the spectacle of a most destructive crevasse! Dr. Speed was called for, and responded. His appearance produced a swelling and up-heaving of the hitherto placid current of the 'opposition.' He plunged right and left, until the agitated waters broke through all barriers and deluged the fair fields that had been so graphically portrayed by the preceding speakers. He saw no streak of light—he beheld no day-break—he saw no dead lion—it was all gas—there was no truth in it. The Democracy were not dead. The opposition had been ridiculing the Democracy as impotent, &c., for the last ten years; but while we (the opposition) were triumphing over the ruins of Democracy, the Democracy were quietly walking off with the spoils. If the opposition expected to beat the Democracy, they must get up with the day-star, take an even start with the 'infernal machine,' (the day-star? or the Democratic car?) and run steadily from early dawn to set of sun—that was the way to beat the Democracy. While this was being said, the Democrats present, (who enjoyed the thing hugely) roared with laughter; and a wicked wag among the 'opposition' was cruel enough to insinuate that Dr. Speed construed this Democratic thunder to be friendly applause, and went ahead with re-doubled energy in consequence thereof. 'Opposition' visages lengthened—and Democratic visages shortened. We have heard of 'ground swells'; everybody has heard of ground swells—but we suspect that this must have been a swell above the ordinary. Dr. S's. speech had the effect of a damper upon the rest—'the chilling effect of a winter shower-bath'—in fact, we have heard some of our friends say that, under the circumstances, it was as good as a Democratic speech, (in its effects.) Nevertheless, although Dr Speed's speech was a bomb shell thrown into the camp of his friends, and was not very apposite to the occasion, nor very well-timed, the accounts we have received indicate, that taken singly and disconnected from surrounding circumstances, it was the best practical common sense speech delivered that day. It annoyed his friends very much—but it annoyed them with the truth; and, as a commentary upon the extravagances of those who had preceded him, it told with terrible effect. Gas and bragging won't out weigh Democratic votes—and Dr. Speed told them so. But that speech was too honest a one to be well received by the 'opposition,' and we should not wonder if a heavy score had been set down against him on account of it.

We gather the above facts from Democrats and 'opposition' men who were present.

CORRUPTION.

Is the President of the United States, the thief and rogue, and rascal, that Opposition decency make him out to be? Is he the unmitigated scoundrel, the base villian, the brazen face swindler, the shameless treasury filcher, and the public robber, that we find charged in every Know nothing sheet in the land, be it great or small? Mr. Buchanan has always borne an irreproachable moral character. The breath of slander has never tainted his fair fame; though even before the people of his country, and serving them in the highest and most responsible positions; though he has mingled in the strife and turmoil of political life, and when party feeling raged bitter, vindictive, and remorseless, he passed through them all unscathed, not even a shade of moral wrong attaching to him.—And can it be now, when upon the verge of the grave; after having served his country with credit and with honor until a ripe old age bring him in view of eternity; when he has nothing to look to in this world beyond the esteem, respect, and veneration of his countrymen; can it be, we say, after all this, and when occupying the first place in the gift of a great people, he should descend to the tricks and meanness of a common penitentiary convict, blasting his proud reputation, and sinking into the grave with the contempt and execrations of every honest man? Can any one believe it? and yet such is the character given by zealous and vindictive partisans to the Executive of this great country. If these men who perpetrate so gross an outrage upon the name and fame of James Buchanan [illegible] generous feeling, or were not dead to all the finer feelings which honor our nature, a thought upon such conduct would tinge their cheeks with shame; and we might expect speedy reparation. Not one noble impulse urges them to any such course, and therefore we may expect a repetition of the unfounded slanders.

THE COMING CONTEST.

We believe that nearly every county in the district have selected delegates to represent them in the convention to meet at Edenton on the 26th of the present month. So far so good: but there is a duty devolving upon the party which, if neglected, may counteract all that has yet been done.—It behooves each and every county to see that they are properly represented, and that the men they have selected shall be in attendance upon the convention to carry out their wishes. To go through the form of holding meetings and appointing delegates, and then leave the matter to take care of itself is a senseless farce that should never be played by any sensible party.—The Democracy are moved and actuated by a regard for a set of principles which they believe to be essential to the welfare and prosperity of our common country, and it is in defence of these principles that we are now required to buckle on our armor and prepare to meet a foe as desperate and unscrupulous as we have ever been called upon to encounter. We are not left in ignorance of the means to be used against us. We know well what kind of weapons will be in the hands of the Opposition and it is for us to do, to be up and doing.

There will be a united, a desperate, a ceaseless effort made by the "Opposition" to defeat us, but if they succeed the fault is ours. Our standard bearer, will be equal to the best man they can produce.—Three of their champions has he met before the people—and we presume there is none that will deny him the honor of a complete and decided victory. He will perform his part of the service in the coming fight; and if we but do ours, another glorious triumph awaits us. We have every confidence that it will be done. We know the enthusiasm of the Democracy in behalf of their gallant and fearless representative, and that they will rush to his support and bear him victoriously through the fight, we firmly believe. Then, Democrats of the gallant old first let us meet you in convention at Elenton on the 26th, let us then give to our brethren in other portions of the State, an earnest of what we intend to do in August; let us then assemble in numbers that will show to the enemy that we are eager for the battle, and are determined to give Sam, with his numerous aliases a blow from which he can never recover.

PRIMARY MEETINGS OF THE DEMOCRACY OF THE DISTRICT.

The Democracy of the several counties in the First District which have already held their meetings for the selection of Delegates to the Congressional Convention, evince the highest and most hopeful courage and we foresee in the harmony and earnestness of their deliberations the sure tokens of a complete victory at the polls in August.

The Democrats of Gates held their meeting at the Court House in Gatesville, April 4th. The meeting was organized by the appointment of Wm. H. Harrell, Esq., Chairman, and J. C. Trotman and Wm. H. Manning, Secretaries. Riddick Gatling Jr., Wm. H. Manning, and Peter Eure were appointed a committee on resolutions, who reported a series which though brief were comprehensive and explicit, and of the true Democratic tone and spirit. Thirty-two delegates were appointed to the District Convention.

The Chowan Democracy met in Edenton on the 13th ult. Dr. R. Dillard was appointed Chairman, and Richard H. Small, Esq., Secretary. All such Democrats of the county as might be present at the District Convention were authorized to act as delegates therein. At the conclusion of the proceedings, a committee was appointed to wait on Hon. H. M. Shaw and request him to address the meeting—after a short lapse of time, the Dr. appeared and spoke ably and eloquently to a large and delighted audience.

A meeting of the Democrats of Pasquotank was held on Monday, 25th April.—Dr. R. H. McIostosh was called to the Chair, and J. L. Ball appointed Secretary. Seventy-five delegates were appointed to the Edenton Convention. The Democracy of Tyrrell met at Columbia on the same day. J. M. Huff acted as Chairman and R. B. Knight as Secretary of the meeting. A delegation of fifteen was appointed to represent the county in the District Convention; and resolutions were adopted emphatically affirming the great and long-cherished principles of the Democratic party, and declaring an inexorable opposition to the dogmas of Whiggery.

The Halifax Democracy assembled at the Court House on Tuesday, the 26th ult. The meeting was organized by the appointment of L. H. B. Whitaker, Chairman, and W. S. Barclift, Secretary. Brief but patriotic and eloquent speeches were made by Dr W J Epps, J B Bachelor and M W Ransom, Esqrs. Sixty-two delegates were appointed to attend the District Convention on the 26th inst.

One of the most enthusiastic political meetings ever held in this district was that of the gallant Democracy of Northampton, in the new Court House at Jackson, on last Monday, the 2d inst. The meeting was called to order by Dr. W. S. Copeland, and Capt. Mark Rogers was appointed Chairman, and Wm. T Josey, Esq. Secretary. Effective and eloquent addresses were made by M. W. Ransom, Edward Conigland and W. W. Peebles, Esqrs, and, a Committee having been assigned the duty of waiting upon Hon. Thomas Bragg to invite his presence in the meeting, he appeared and made a telling speech which was greeted with immense applause. The enthusiasm awakened by this gathering is auspicious of success; and we are convinced that Northampton will do her whole duty in next August.

Resolutions were passed by all these meetings endorsing with enthusiastic heartiness the course and position of Dr. Shaw, and favoring his renomination at the Edenton Congressional Convention.

Murfreesboro' Citizen.

A PLATFORM FOR THE OPPOSITION.

From the Richmond Whig of January 29th, 1856.

PLATFORM OF THE SOFT SHELL BLACK REPUBLICAN AMERICANS OF RICHMOND.

We subjoin the following as constituting the platform of principles contended for by John M. Botts and his followers in this city:

1. We believe that Congress possesses the constitutional power to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia.

2. We believe in the constitutionality of the Wilmot proviso—that is, in the constitutional power of Congress to prohibit slavery in the Territories.

3. We believe that Congress possesses the constitutional power to reject any slave State applying for admission into the Union upon the ground that it is a slave State.

4. We insist that the entire question of slavery and Southern rights shall be "ignored" in all future conventions and platforms of the American party.

5. We believe in the "immaculate conception" of John Minor Botts, and prefer him to any other man in the world for the Presidency.

OPPOSITION "FACTS AND STATEMENTS."

Our opponents are working themselves into an awful excitement; the language of decent society cannot express their hatred to democracy; therefore, they are driven to the use of that idiom known as "Grog-shop Slang." We give a few specimens:

"There appears to be really no end to locofoco rascality, as practised by Democratic office-holders and Congressmen."

"Men who are no better than abandoned thieves and robbers of other men's property."

"MORE CORRUPTION.—The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press says that exposures will be made during the next session of Congress, which will demand the impeachment of high officials. It would seem in many departments, that there is a deliberate disregard of the letter of the law, and what is more shameful still that there have been authorized violations of the sanctity of private correspondence.

Serious charges to be promulgated against the National Government, as administered by men who have grown grey in the public service, and of irreproachable character in private life. The authority for these slanderous statements is thus given:

"The same correspondent further states that a gentleman of one of the cities of the West holds himself responsible with another, on oath, to prove that not only were documents ordered not to be distributed when sent by a certain Senator, but that letters were also violated."

"It is said that an Investigating Committee will be called on this matter, as well as on the mail-practices of the Post Office Department, at an early day of the next session."

The annonymous correspondent of a renegade newspaper! A gentleman of one of the cities of the West!" "A certain Senator!" All winding up with a "It is said!!" These are the authorities upon which public journals undertake to disseminate libellous accusations against the leading statesmen of the country, and will continue to disseminate them until "the next Congress," when they will be dropped to take up another slander to be proved at a distant day, which never arrives. These are opposition "facts and statements," and the authority upon which they are founded. They are a fair specimen of opposition tactics and editorial statements.—Warrenton News.

The Weldon Correspondent of the Petersburg Press, in a notice of a Democratic meeting in Northampton, says:

Hon. Thomas Bragg being in Jackson on a visit, on motion of Gen. Ransom a committee was appointed to wait on him and request his presence in the meeting, and an address.

Another committee was then, on motion of Frank Lockhart, Esq., appointed to draft resolutions.

'Ransom!' 'Ramson!' 'Ransom!' then resounded from every part of the house, when that gentleman came forward and made one of the most appropriate speeches for an occasion of the kind that I ever listened to. It was entirely appropriate and much applauded. Towards the close of his remarks, Gen. R. took occasion to allude in the very highest terms of commendation to Hon. H. M Shaw, and a stranger present would have discovered in a moment that distinguished gentleman had a tenacious hold upon the affections of the vast assemblage (for it was a very large meeting,) then present; for no sooner did the name of "Shaw" escape the speaker's lips than there was one grand, simultaneous outburst of applause, which told plainer than words that they were for him, first, last, and all the time.

FUGITIVE SLAVE CASE AT ZANESVILLE.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, May 3.—A fugitive slave named Wm Jackson, claimed as belonging to Clarksburg, Va., was taken before Judge Marsh this morning, who decided that the prisoner was illegally held and discharged him. Immediately after his release he was re-arrested, put in irons and driven to the railroad depot for the purpose of taking him to Wheeling. A desperate attempt was made by the colored population of the town to rescue him, during which pistols and clubs were freely used, and several persons were injured.—The attempt was unsuccessful. In the meanwhile a writ was served on the marshall, commanding him to bring the prisoner before the court. This point has not yet been settled. Considerable excitement prevails here regarding the affair.

ZANESVILLE, May 4.—The fugitive slave Jackson has been delivered to his master, and was taken to Virginia this morning.—There was a large crowd gathered at the depot, but no attempt was made to rescue him.

PHILADELPHIA MUNICIPAL ELECTION.—The citizens of Philadelphia, on Tuesday, held their usual municipal election for the choice of city treasurer, commissioner, councilmen and school directors. The result is Brown, people's candidate, is chosen treasurer, by 2,260 majority, and Neal, on the same ticket, is elected commissioner by a majority of 2,665. These figures show large democratic gains, as the people's candidate for mayor was chosen last year by a majority of about 4,700. The people's party have also elected a majority of the councilmen and school directors. The election was an unusually quiet one, and the vote of both parties comparatively light. The aggregate vote is about 45,000, a falling off of 18,000 compared with the mayor's election.

THE EXPENSES OF THE PARAGUAY EXPEDITION.—The allegation of the republican journals that the President has spent millions upon this expedition is wholly unfounded. We repeat what we stated in our article of Thursday last on this subject, that this expedition will not cost the government a dollar beyond the ordinary expenditures of the Navy Department in time of peace, except the sum of two hundred and eighty-nine thousand dollars for the purchase of seven small steamers. An appropriation was made for this purpose by the last Congress, and all will admit that these vessels of a light draught of water were greatly needed by the navy. The New York Herald, therefore, in its powerful article of Tuesday last, demonstrating the advantages of the Paraguay expedition to our commerce on the waters of the La Plata, as well as to the character of our country, (which we published yesterday,) might have explicitly denied that the President had spent millions, or even thousands, on this expedition.—Washington Union.

THE EXCITEMENT AMONG MORMONS SOMEWHAT ABATED.

This is attributed the knowledge the Mormons to the practical working of the which was passed by the late it being a complete breastwork ishment of any crime that was mitted by the Mormons. VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE.—THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM situated in Craven County, on lower Broad and Orchard Creeks, near Neuse River, seven miles from the town of Jackson, containing 2500 acres, more or less, several hundred of which are prime Swamp Land, about 200 acres cleared, the remainder in woods, which is excellent timber, suitable for building or ship purposes.—There are about 100 acres ditched, deadened, under-bushed and the cord wood cut; a small amount of labor would prepare it for cultivation. There are also two crops of Turpentine Boxes on it.

The Land is well adapted to Cotton, Corn, Wheat, Potatoes, &c., and is highly susceptible of improvement. The facilities for shipping are rarely equalled.

The improvements consist of a fine large Dwelling, Kitchen, Smoke-House, Gin-House, Barns, Stables, and Negro Houses sufficient to accommodate Fifty Negroes, together with all other necessary out-buildings, in good order. The Garden and Orchard abound in a great variety of the choicest Fruits, viz: Grapes, Figs, Raspberries, Strawberries, Cherries, Apples, Pears and Peaches. Oysters and Fish may be taken in abundance from the creek at the back of the garden, and Wild Fowl, in great variety, abound in the vicinity.—There is also a good mill site, with dam already constructed on the place. There is a good well of water in the yard.

The premises have the reputation of being healthy and the situation is desirable, and my only object in desiring to sell is the fact that I intend to quit farming.

Persons wishing to buy can apply to me on the premises, or to J. Gooding, sr., at Newbern.

THE WEEKLY STATES,
PUBLISHED BY
PRYOR & HEISS.
AT
WASHINGTON, D. C.

Subscription price - - - - $1 00 per year.

With the view of securing the largest possible circulation among the masses of the people, the proprietors of THE STATES have determined to reduce the price of the Weekly paper to

ONE DOLLAR PER ANNUM.

THE STATES will be conducted with an exclusive regard to the principles of the State-rights Democracy, will be independent of factions, and unbiassed by partial interests—in short, will continue on the line it has pursued under its present management. We presume it has given a sufficient exemplification of its principles and objects to dispense with the necessity of any formal professions.

Located at the Federal Capital, THE STATES has great advantages over other journals in procuring important and valuable information relating to the affairs of government. Its central position also enables it to procure at the earliest moment the latest foreign and dometic news, and in its columns will always be found matters of interest appertaing to Literature, Agriculture, and Commerce.

The price of subscription is fixed so low, that it brings the paper within the reach of every person who desires a good and reliable newspaper. We therefore appeal to our Democratic friends throughout the country to aid us in securing THE STATES an extended circulation.

To those who will take the trouble of getting us up a club of ten subscribers, at the rate of ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR for each subscriber, we will send a copy of the WEEKLY STATES for one year gratis.

Payments in all cases required in advance.
Current money in the different States received in payment for subscriptions.

All letters susuld be addressed to
PRYOR & HEISS.

THE DAILY & SEMI-WEEKLY STATES
Are published at the following rates:

The largest and best stock of Books and Stationery ever offered for sale in the City of Norfolk.

Believing that the wants and the tastes of the people required one establishment similar to those found in the large Northern cities, where a full and general assortment of Books can be obtained, the subscriber has been induced, during a recent visit to Philadelphia, New York and Boston, to purchase from the principal publishers, and at the great "Trade Sales," a superior stock of

A VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE
IN NORFOLK CO., VA.

IT lies on the Dismal Swamp Canal, about 7 miles from Deep Creek and 14 from Norfolk, and contains from 1200 to 1500 acres, about 150 to 200 of which are now in arable order, the balance in original forest.

The soil is adapted to the production of Indian corn and other crops usually cultivated in that section. About 5 or 600 acres of the tract would make as fine a farm as any in Eastern Virginia; adjoining lands of similar quality unimproved, have produced from 14 to 15 barrels of corn per acre, and the wood and timber on the land would pay every expense of clearing, when it would be worth $50 per acre.

It presents, also, great facilities for carrying on the wood business. Immense quantities of the best quality could be sold at paying prices at Norfolk or on the Canal bank, along which the land stretches for several miles. The facilities of water carriage would also render the trucking business profitable.

There is a large Juniper swamp on the tract, valuable for its rail and shingle timber.

The pasturage and range for Stock is unsurpassed. A free School is within one mile of the dwelling Persons desirous of purchasing are referred to Messrs. George T. Wallace and John West, who live near the place, and to Mr. Benjamin T. Tatem, near Norfolk, who will take pleasure in showing the land.

For further information and terms, which will be liberal, apply to

JOSEPH T. TATEM.

INFIRMARY FOR SLAVES.
ELIZABETH CITY, N. C.

THE SUBSCRIBER has opened at the Marine Hospital (in a separate building) an INFIRMARY FOR INVALID SLAVES. He has ample accommodations for a limited number, and will give them his careful attention—supplying them with every necessary their case requires. An Institution of this kind offers many advantages to masters having servants afflicted with chronic or surgical diseases. And, from its economy, they are relieved of the expense and annoyance of having such upon a plantation.

The charges for Board, Medical attendance, Nursing, and Medicine, are $6 per week, payable upon the removal of the patient.

In cases requiring a surgical operation, in addition to the above rates, a fee varying from $2 to $30. in different cases, will be charged for the operation, the particulars of which may be ascertained upon application at the Infirmary.

The services of any other regular Physician will be allowed, at the expense of the master.

Persons in the country desiring to send patients to the Infirmary, or obtain information concerning it, may address the subscriber.

☞ No contagious diseases admitted.
